Congress may assemble in a few days under the emergency created by the carnival of crime at the South. At the longest it will meet in a few weeks. Upon its temper depends very much. Representatives have before this shown a strange facility or fatality in misapprehending the wishes of the people. They must not do so now. If they imagine that the elections are taken of particular admiration for them, if they think they can begin again, just where they left off last April, alarmed at the popular discontent and the increasing danger of losing the election; if they allow themselves to be persuaded that, now the campaign is over, it will do to take the screws off the expenditures, they make a great mistake. They will not get off so easily next time. * That party is dead and gone, and even its name is likely to perish. There is certain to be a recast of the political elements, according to the new and live issues; and, now, if the leaders of the Republican party-men who live by it and think they own it-wish to keep it in control of the Government, they must make it attractive for those who look to honesty, integrity and efficiency in administration.
